“The Commerce Department reported today that after falling slightly in April, U.S. exports edged up in May, decreasing the trade deficit to $48.7 billion. Travel exports also rebounded in May, increasing by $60 million. This growth was three times more than the $20 million increase in overall goods exports and accounted for 17 percent of the increase in total exports.
“The growth in travel exports continues to assist in narrowing the nation’s international trade deficit. Through the first five months of the year, travel exports increased 12 percent from the same period in 2011, double the six percent increase of overall exports."
