Écrit par sylvie.duval@finances.gouv.fr (Sylvie Duval)
Jeudi, 11 Juillet 2013 00:00 -

Spain's tourism boom keeps troubled country partying
Summer could not have come soon enough for Lloret de Mar, a tourist resort north of Barcelona that is brimming with young travelers from Britain, Germany, France and Russia.
By day, they flock to the main beach with its steep descent into the Mediterranean, and by night they crowd the streets lined with clubs called Londoner, Hot Spot or Zoo.
It is a scene repeated up and down Spain's extensive coastline along the Mediterranean, the Atlantic and its famous archipelagos, the Balearic and Canary Islands.
Spain's economic crisis is in its sixth straight year yet tourism, worth 11% of GDP, is holding its own, one of the few bright spots on a bleak horizon.

en savoir plus

Consultez la source sur Veille info tourisme: Espagne le tourisme se maintient malgré la crise