Veneto, one of the twenty Italian regions, recorded positive tourism numbers over the first eight months. Even in the difficult year, marked by crisis that hit Italian tourism, the region managed to keep steady at the helm, and reported an increase in arrivals of 1.4% from January to August 11.9 million tourists.

However, while the number of tourists grew, the amount of overnight stays actually showed a decline of 1.8% on the previous year's data.

Foreign tourists were responsible for the influx, up by 3.1% in arrivals and 1.1% in overnight stays, while the domestic tourism is in decline (-1.9% in arrivals and -6.9% in overnight stays).
